Urmutter is depicting one of the most equipped bathrooms in New York City offices at the end of the 19th century. The Mott Iron Work, the company that designed the legendary Marcel Duchamp's pissoir, was the original maker of this bathroom. Urmutter defines itself as a pre-readymade bathroom that potentially expresses all the various dynamics that underlie the base of contemporary society.

Urmutter is dedicated to the memory of Baroness Elsa von Freytag-Loringhoven.
